ABOUT LA UNION

La Union is a province located 270 KM north of Manila, the Philippines' city capital. It is bordered on the west by the West Philippine Sea shoreline, making it a popular beach destination among local travelers looking for a quick weekend getaway near Manila. La Union's capital city of San Fernando is Ilocos Region's cultural and commercial center.

Known as the "Surfing Capital of the North, the beaches of Barangay Urbiztondo in San Juan is one of the tourist spots in La Union, but there's more to the province than just surfing in the Philippines. It also has centuries-old churches, heritage sites, natural attractions such as the Tangadan Falls, and a thriving local arts scene along with agri-tourism farms that are open to the public. You won't run out of things to do in La Union.

THE BEST PLACES TO VISIT

The ruins is one of the top places to visit in La Union and refers to the remains of a church built by Augustinian priests in the late 1700s during the Spanish colonial period, while Pindangan, an Ilocano word which translates to “a place for drying fish,” is where local inhabitants used to lay out salted fish to dry out in the sun, a process of preserving and curing meat that the town of San Fernando is known for to this day.

The 400 year old Baluarte Watch Tower was built during the Spanish colonial period and served as a place to warn residents against pirates and foreign looters along the coastal town.

The Ma-Cho Temple's architecture cuts a striking image across the La Union skyline. Nestled on top of a hill at an elevation of 70 above sea level along Quezon Avenue in San Fernando, the highest point offers a panoramic view of the West Philippine Sea and San Fernando harbor. It is the first Taoist temple in the Philippines that was built in 1975 to honor the Chinese sea-goddess Mazu.

Located in the town of San Gabriel, La Union, Tangadan Falls is a two-tier waterfall that flows into the Baroro River, with the water coming in from the Cordillera Mountain Ranges. The lower cascade of the falls has a width of 100 feet and a 40 foot drop.

Immuki island is made up of a series of small lagoons filled with pools of water held together by corals. It has three crystal clear pools that are perfect to dip into on a hot, sunny day.

When tourists visit La Union, one of the first things that typically comes to mind is the beach. Most visitors associate the town with surfing, swimming under the heat of the sun, and enjoying the tropical weather. But what most travelers don't know is that La Union is also a top farm tour destination in the Philippines. One of the top farms in La Union is the Gapuz Grapes Farm.
